

28 October 2025

Oliver Yerbury-Hodgson
Lead Software Engineer (Full-stack)

Dear Oliver,

Your role is at risk of redundancy

Further to our meeting held today regarding the proposed restructure at Piclo, I am writing to confirm that your role is at risk of redundancy.

As explained, we are considering making 19 employees within the company redundant. This is because Piclo is currently facing significant financial pressures and, without action, the company's future sustainability is at risk. To reduce our costs and extend the company's runway into next year, we are proposing to scale back the size of the team. Unfortunately, your position is one of those identified as being at risk.

What happens next?

We are now entering a consultation process. The purpose of consultation is to:

- discuss ways of avoiding or reducing the number of redundancies;
- give you the opportunity to raise questions and make suggestions;
- consider possible suitable alternative employment within Piclo;
- agree or explain the criteria on which any selection for redundancy would be based;
and
- understand your needs during this process and provide appropriate support.

Your position may be placed in a redundancy pool if there are colleagues in the same job category. This means that not everyone in the pool will necessarily be made redundant. Following consultation, selection criteria and interview will be used to determine which employees within the pool are selected for redundancy and which will remain in their roles. No decisions have been made at this stage, and a final outcome will only be confirmed once consultation has concluded.

Consultation arrangements

We will be consulting with all affected employees through a collective consultation process on Friday 31st October at 11am, as well as meeting with you individually. As part of this consultation, we will fully explain the pools. A list of the initial pools will be shared with you before the collective consultation meeting.

You will shortly receive an invitation to these meetings where we will discuss options for avoiding redundancies, the proposed selection criteria and interview process, and any concerns you may have. All feedback and suggestions will be considered carefully before any decisions are made.

The consultation period is expected to last at least 2 weeks, after which we will confirm the outcome and, where applicable, issue redundancy notices.

Support available

We recognise that this is a difficult time and want to reassure you that support is available:

- WeCare from Canada Life: Virtual health and wellbeing service, available 24/7 for you and your family. Company access code is E29681 (<https://www.canadalife.co.uk/workplace-protection/support-services/wecare/>)
- Vitality: Access to a range of health and wellbeing services via your Vitality app.

In addition to the support services available through Piclo, you may find the following external organisations helpful for independent advice and guidance:

- MoneyHelper: Government-backed financial guidance, including redundancy calculators (www.moneyhelper.org.uk)
- Mind / Samaritans: Mental health and emotional support (www.mind.org.uk / Tel. 116 123).

Please feel free to contact your manager, myself, or our HR Consultant Laura directly if you have questions or would like further discussion. We appreciate that this situation is unsettling and want to reassure you that we will keep you fully informed throughout.

Yours sincerely

Alice Tyler
COO and Co-founder