Dear Mr Yerbury-Hodgson

Oliver Yerbury-Hodgson d.o.b.05/09/1995
55 Avon Street Warwick CV34 4PX

Diagnosis: Slight hyperpronation both feet.

Ongoing symptoms: Anterolateral impingement type pain on the right-hand side.

Medical history: You had laparoscopic surgery, you are fit and well, non-smoker and no known allergies.

Treatment so far: 7 months of physiotherapy with no improvement.

Treatment today: Clinical assessment.

Plan: Follow up after standing x-ray to assess the alignment and an MRI scan to assess the soft tissue.

Thank you for coming to see me today with the above problem. It has been ongoing since a hiking trip 2 years ago. It has been a steady pain but got worse 5 months ago when you started physiotherapy which unfortunately has not provided any improvement.

On examination, you walk unaided, and you drop your instep as you put your foot to the ground. Your hindfoot valgus is still well-maintained. You can double and single heel raise normally and bilaterally, which indicates that the tendons and ligaments are still functioning with no issues. There was no tenderness elicited over the medial aspect. There is some discomfort on palpation over the anterolateral ankle gutter and other than that, examination was unremarkable, and you were neurovascularly intact.

Once the scans are done, kindly book an appointment to see me face to face and we will take from there.

Yours sincerely

Tarek El Gamal (electronically checked and sent to avoid delay)
